It would be very useful for me to have a class that represents the truth values True, False, and Unspecified. For example, it might look like this: class Truth(object): True = "TRUE" False = "FALSE" Undefined = "???" And the truth value would be "TRUE" if the inputted value was true, "FALSE" if it was false, and "???" if it was unknown. It would be very useful for a third-party library I am writing to provide this functionality (especially since it would be perfectly understandable to use it and have a consistent interface for truth values as well as other things such as numbers, strings, lists, etc.). If it matters, I do not want to use "UNKNOWN" since it does not look very similar to the other values. The current truth value would be "???" if it was not set. A: You could have an add-on module like this: import sys TRUTH = (True, False, None) def truth(value): if type(value) is int: f678ea9f9e
